BOUCHER BROTHERS DEFEAT SENATORS; SOO WELCOMES GREYHOUNDS

SPORT IS MY SUBJECT

By DEACON WHITE

The great game of British rugby is at last taking hold in this city, and the broad trail of credit leads right up to the doors of the house of Mr. George Dewe and Mr. J. Wallace Jarman.

This pair of evangelists, one from the antipodes, New Zealand, and the other from the British Isles, began to preach the gospel of British Rugby in this city back in the fall of 1921. They preached with such fervor and righteous zeal that their doctrine found a ready foothold at that time. Since then it has been spreading, until today it is established firmly in the sporting life of this city.

Why it is necessary to do any missionary work at all over any rugby game will always be more or less of a mystery to me. Rugby, whether it is the British, Canadian, or American brand—the last two were evolved from the British—is the greatest game played. And the testimony to that fact is the wonderful patronage accorded to it everywhere it has firmly taken root.

In United States stadiums ranging from fifty to eighty thousand people are filled every week throughout the football season. At one game last fall, it is recorded that there were two hundred thousand applications for seats. It has baseball backed off the map down there, and is really the great national game, although that epithet is usually accorded to baseball.

In eastern Canada, the home of Canadian rugby, the patronage accorded the game far exceeds hockey even, and that, too, with stadiums that are entirely inadequate to accommodate the demands.

As for New Zealand, I am not in possession of any accurate figures as to attendance down there; but this I do know, they turn out some wonderful teams in this little country, and some wonderful players. As a matter of fact, the chances are that the best teams in New Zealand can give them all cards and spades at playing rugby. So it is very likely that the attendance down there is worth bragging about.

It's a great game for great people. There is actually more kick out of a good rugby game than any other game played, not even excepting hockey. There isn't so much of the physical contact in hockey today as there once was. The old days of hockey, when they used to smash them into the boards and step into them with all they had, were just as thrilling as rugby, but not any more. Today, if you want to get a real kick, you have to go to a high-class rugby game, or a boxing exhibition.

Wallace Jarman, who is now president of the Alberta British Rugby Union, is an old international player from the British Isles. He is at the head of a tidy little league in this city composed of three clubs, the Eskimos, Edmonton, and Canadian Nationals.

Their season opens on the 18th of April, Good Friday, with a game between the Eskimos and Edmonton clubs. They are playing only during the spring months, leaving the fall open to the Canadian brand of rugby.

This is an extremely sportsmanlike thing to do on the part of these British rugby exponents. In doing this, they are carrying out in fact the best traditions of their land for sportsmanlike and fair play. And in addition, they are working for the common good of the Canadian brand of rugby in this city, because they are going to bring out material and develop it for use in the fall of the local Eskimo Canadian rugby club.

Along about the 24th of May, it is the intention of this British Rugby League to bring up the best team from Vancouver, where the game has been established for many years, and play a series of two games for the championship of the two provinces, which means western Canada. Two years ago this coming fall, Edmonton went to Vancouver and were defeated. This year they are going to reverse the tables, and if they succeed in getting the best material in the city out this spring, they should be able to do it all right.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 31.—George Burns, veteran outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, is facing the shadows of obscurity. A hero of many world series campaigns, and for years, one of the greatest outfielders in the game, Burns this spring finds himself with his back to the wall, battling to hold his job.

Except for the possibility of Burns passing to the bench, the Reds reserve practically intact, with a hold-over catching department, a veteran infield and three additions to its pitching staff—May from the Cubs, Leake from the Boston Braves, and Shesha from the American Association, and plays late of the Yankees.

Burns, who grows no younger as the springs roll along, is having a hard time getting started. His old spot is gone and drives that used to fall into his gloved hand are now going for home hits. He has taken on weight and is no longer a feared man on the paths.

George Harper, for three years the Reds' reserve outfielder, and Ed Heck, a left-hander from Oklahoma City, are leading candidates for Burns' place.

Harper is not a great hitter and it Heck, who is both fast and a skilled fielder, can keep close to the .300 mark against major league pitching, he will out Burns.

This is Heck's third trip to the Reds' camp.

The passing of Burns would mark the end of an outfield combination that has ranked with the elite in the big leagues.

Champ Signal Stealer Says Stunt is Passed

Danny Murphy, champion signal stealer of the big leagues, is dissatisfied.

Murphy, now coaching the Philadelphia Athletics, laments the passage of this most intricate and interesting phase of the game as it was practiced in the days gone by.

"Very little signal stealing goes on in the big leagues today," declares Murphy. "It isn't that the coaches are unable to discover the signals the other fellows are using. That is no more difficult now than it was in the past. The drawback is that the players don't care to use them. They don't care to run the risk of being tipped off wrong, so they go up there and use their own judgment."

Murphy recalled, with a reminiscent smile, how the old Athletics used to tip off Gabby Street's signals.

"Gabby used to catch for Washington," reminded Murphy. "He would take his signals with his hands and give the real ones with his eyes. When he signed his eyes it was a fast ball. Open eyes meant a hook. We won a lot of games by watching Gabby's eyes and he never knew it."

"We used to beat the old Tigers in a similar way. Oscar Straub would give his signals with his mouth. When he wanted a fast one he'd open his mouth, a hook he'd close it."

"Oscar thought the sign on the mound protected him from detection, and it did. But we never watched Oscar's mouth. We always watched his hand, and we noticed whenever he opened his mouth his chin would turn the mask down about two inches."

"That was our tipoff, and as far as I know Oscar never found out about it. At any rate, he never changed his system and we followed it with effect for several years."

In the course of this trip he travelled over six railway lines and the result of his impressions was to the effect that the C.N.R. was just a little bit ahead of what they had to show across the border. He considered that the greatest credit must be given to Sir Henry Thornton and E. H. Warren for the way in which they had handled the two lines.

BRITISH TEXTILES

LONDON, March 26.—The assertion is made by the trade correspondent of the Yorkshire Post regarding the flow of British textiles to Canada that "not until the Canadian commodity has reached the same high standard that the British commodity is likely that imports will be retarded. Only an almost prohibitive duty can stop the demand for goods of superior quality." The late official figures concerning British exports of ready-made garments show a steady and substantial progress for the last three years. MORNING MARKET NEWS OF THE MARKETS

Returning Bouyancy Shown On Winnipeg Wheat Market Although Trade Was Light

WINNIPEG, March 31.—After opening about unchanged, the wheat market exhibited signs of returning buoyancy, although the trading was not very active, with only a light trade passing, values remained very steady throughout the session. Liverpool cables were firmer and there were indications that a better feeling is slowly developing. Export business on the week-end was light, but advices from the seaboard suggested an enlarged demand from the United Kingdom and the continent for Canadian wheat and views are expressed that there will be no burdensome carry-over, despite large stocks on hand at present. At the close, May wheat improved one-half, July five-eighths, and October seven-eighths. Un-

"SQUISH M.P."

Quite a romantic exhibition in connection with Mrs. Hilma Phillips' election to Parliament is revealed by the exhibition of Betty Balfour's latest film, "Squish M.P.," which opened at the Empress Theatre today.

The character of "Squish" was made famous in cinema by Betty Balfour, but originally it was taken from a stage sketch in which Mrs. Phillips, who is Hilma's sister, appeared as "Squish" and which was brought by Henry Welsh, former C.W. Ltd., the film producer.

M.B. Examinations

Law students studying under the old article system will write their M.B. examinations under the new system for the last time this year. The examinations will be written at the University, and begin April 22. Applications should be in the hands of Cecil B. Mack, registrar today.

New Council Meets

A meeting of the new council of the University of Alberta, held yesterday afternoon, to lay plans for the coming year. Dr. H. M. Dyer, President of the University, presided. Business sessions were held, at which a number of matters were discussed.

A committee consisting of Mr. K. J. Dyer, president of the Union, Dr. Dyer, and Mr. MacDonald has been appointed to investigate the subject and make a report to the Council next Thursday.

The Council is meeting again on Thursday at 7 p.m.

The meeting will be held in the hall of the Union, and it is expected that the meeting will be lively to say the least.

A meeting of the Students' Union will be held on Friday afternoon to consider a memorial to the University of Alberta, and it is expected that the meeting will be lively to say the least.

AUTO IS DAMAGED

The cranial gates on the C.N.R. train, first three were hit down on the car driven by Mrs. A. Wilson, when the car was struck by the train, and it is expected that the meeting will be lively to say the least.

FLOOD IS STOLEN

A Ford sedan belonging to Mrs. George H. Smith, of Edmonton, was stolen last night from the garage. The police are making efforts to find the car but up to now it has not been recovered.

When Your Throat Is Sore

It may be only a slight cold now—but a little later it may become a serious illness. Often they become chronic, develop catarrh and end in consumption.

Chloroform is the remedy that drives out Catarrh. It draws in inflammation and removes it out of the throat, relieves the cough, cures the phlegm, makes breathing easy, kills any germs hiding in the mucous lining of the throat.

By using CHLOROFORM IN THE THROAT you can avoid the pain and expense of a long and tedious cure. Get the Chloroform, it lasts two months, small size, 50c. sold by druggists. It cures a sore throat, Catarrh, Hoarseness, by mail from Dr. Hamilton, 1111 St. George, Montreal.

CORRECT FEEDING FOR MORE EGGS ADDS THE PROFIT

Feeds Must Be in Right Proportion to Secure Maximum Production

For maximum egg production it is necessary that the hen should be fed the right way. Even with a ration in which the feeds are in the right proportion, a hen can lay only so many eggs as the body is able to produce.

The greater part of the cost of keeping a hen goes on day by day throughout the year, whether she is laying well, or poorly, or not at all. A five-pound hen requires the equivalent of 10 pounds of corn a year just for maintenance. This much feed she must have for body upkeep before any egg laying can follow.

Whatever else is beyond maintenance is available for egg production, but when the feed is used for anything other than maintenance, the hen is not laying well.

To reduce the daily maintenance the hen is not fed well, or to increase the food allowance following an increase in egg production is to use feed for egg production, not for maintenance.

We must feed for future results, not for past performance.

Kind of Feed
To feed nothing but whole grain is one of the common mistakes in poultry feeding. A complete ration for laying hens must contain not only scratch feed, or whole grain, but also ground feeds, animal protein, green feed, mineral feed and water. The omission of any of these results in less production than could otherwise be secured.

When feed can be allowed to mature, especially during the spring and summer months, they obtain a variety of feeds for themselves. During the winter, however, when there is little to be picked up, they must be fed to supply everything needed.

If hens are kept in confinement, it is, of course, necessary to supply a complete ration at all times.

The Scratch Feed
The scratch feed should contain at least two, and preferably three, grains. Often there can be all home-grown. When corn is the common grain it should be mixed freely in the scratch feed. Under normal price conditions it may make up from one-half to two-thirds of the scratch-feed mixture. If more than this is fed the hens may get fat and become early moulted, and the production will be lowered and the eggs will be small.

What is well liked by fowls and is fed in every season is the scratch feed. In feeding value it is equal to corn, but it is not so easily digested. When it is fed in small quantities it is not so easily digested. When it is fed in large quantities it is not so easily digested.

If heavy oats can be secured, they may be included in the scratch feed for the oat kernel is an excellent food. It should be remembered, however, that the hull is mostly made of fibre, and which is not so easily digested. The feeding of light chaffy oats in poultry would result in a loss rather than a gain.

It is not likely to be fed in very limited amounts. Other grains that are available, may be used in a scratch feed, but they are not so easily digested as the scratch feed.

A THANKSGIVING DEITY
Feas Prohibition that we advocate.

In the year, come on. But now there are those whose throat could not be saved. In a hand so dry.

And here is every one who is agitated. (With January night.) The privilege of getting "applied" as in the case of the.

Now in Alberta will have less of prohibition. But I am a thanksgiving deity. That I am not to blame for "to be" is a thanksgiving deity.

Being chased with cranks. As I object to the prohibition. Of being ranked with "cranks" for being to fight a "moderate" prohibition.

I also thanksgiving deity. I. H. DILL, Hiram, Alta, March 21, 1924.

MISS ALICE

BY DOUGLAS GRANT

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Sally Peck, employee of the Fair and Ten, quarrels with her police officer sweetheart, Michael Curtis, who is the son of the owner of the store. She is about to take down a warning

from the police officer's car. A crash strikes the car and something strikes Sally a blow

on the head.

When she regains consciousness

she finds herself in strange surroundings. A French maid calls her. Alice, Captain and Madame

Conrad, a rich, highly respected woman, claim her as her daughter.

Sally means Cousin Wheeler,

but makes love to her. She resolves to solve the mystery of why she is being substituted for the real

Miss Conrad.

Michael Curtis and his friend

Captain Trevor, follow the trail of the missing Miss. They go to a murder, where a strange girl runs

a car and makes a mad drive.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"I've been expecting one of you boys to drop over here every day used to ask about her. There was something mighty queer about that young lady, Frank! Oh, Frank!" He said back over his shoulder into the cupola of the garage, then turned once more at Alice's anxious question.

"What do you mean by 'queer'?"

"Crooked, maybe!" Halston said quickly, unaware that the enquirer's hand had been on his shoulder. "Did I know myself as being in no straight from Que-becia over there - where we watched you pull off that really little raid on his game just now - and seeing that a fat man in a black coat and a hat was driving a motor car to take her to New York?

That might have been about it last evening. I let her have the best

I had for fifty dollars the trip."

"What makes you say it?"

"The young lady gave him a quick glance. "That was the young lady

you were talking about, wasn't it?"

"Yes, that was the young lady."

"And the numbers 21-200 2. Here's Frank, and here's about it to you if you like."

"I'll take your word for it," Mike said to the younger man who had emerged sleepily from the garage.

Where did you drive the motor-car to, in New York, last Tuesday?"

"Nowhere!" Frank grinned. "She made entrance around on Brock-street, drove back and forth in the square of Railroad Avenue but I didn't see anything more of that black-looking guy."

He paused for breath but Mike

with a quick glance at Lieutenant

Trevor, who was hovering near, demanding eagerly:

"The girl, Halston! Had you lost her?"

"Well, I'll tell you! I was sitting around the entrance to that back street at about three in the afternoon when a woman came down the back street and she seemed to me to be a very well-known girl. She had a big blue bag, I saw she had hair and was wearing away her finger made me take another look and it was the same girl! I was in a hurry!"

Mike uttered a sharp exclamation:

"Did she see you?"

"No, she was looking around pretty hard but I knew it was I that felt. There was a train for

New York just pulling in and she must have seen it. With me after

I got out on the platform I was about to see her climb aboard just as it started. Then she came around a little longer to see if she would show up but he didn't."

"I drove on home, Bay. If there's any reward in that, I'll see that you get your share of it for you've done good work, but there's been nothing as yet. Come on now, Lawrence, hurry to have kept you waiting so long."

"For a while they drove on in silence through the night for Mike was wrapped up in his problem and his companion, too, seemed lost in thought. It was the interruption, who finally broke the silence between them.

"I couldn't help overhearing some of that talk, Mike. Are you out as-yet?"

"I'm after my pretty girl, quarter! Morning when and where, they next morning she was out in her look. There she lives alongside the trucks - when the Gotham Arrow
